Charity background

Cogwheel Counselling is a Cambridge-based mental health charity formed in 1988. Cogwheel provides affordable and accessible counselling to individuals of all ages (including children/young people) on low and limited incomes. These individuals would not otherwise be able to access counselling, either because they are unable to afford private counselling or capacity in NHS mental health services is extremely stretched and prioritised for those with acute needs.

The Charity's founding Christian ethos, which includes compassion, respect, listening and healing, still provides a motivation for many within the charity. The organisation seeks to provide a unique and effective therapeutic service available to everyone, irrespective of their financial circumstances and personal beliefs.

Cogwheel has a team of 20+ counsellors who in 2024 provided over 4,000 counselling sessions and the charity was approached by nearly 450 people for help. The charity operates from the Citizens Advice Bureau in Cambridge and offers a bespoke service of in person, online and telephone counselling.

Cogwheel is funded by a mix of client session contributions, grants, donations and community fundraising.

The Charity Trustee Board has 7 Trustees and the present Chair of Trustees has been in role for 1 year.

This is a voluntary position for a charity which through its mental health counselling service can make a transformative difference to client's lives.
